Garfield, in the House of Representatives, Friday, August 4, 1876 He emphasizes the statement that the South cheerfully accepts the results of the war; and admits that that much good has been achieved by the Republican party, which ought to be preserved. I was gratified to bear the gentleman speak of Lincoln as the illustrious author of the great act of emancipation. That admission will be welcomed everywhere by those who believe in the justice and wisdom of that great act. While speaking of the condition of the South and its wants he deplores two evils which afflict that portion of our country: First, Federal supervision; and second, negro ascendancy in its political affairs. In that connection, it will be remembered, he quoted from John Stuart Mill and from Gibbon; the one, to show that the most deplorable form of government is where the slave governs; and from the other, to show the evils of a government which is in alien hands. The gentleman represented the South as suffering the composite evils depicted by both these great writers. That I may be sure to do him justice I quote a paragraph from the Associated Press report of his speech: The Inevitable effect, of that reconstruction policy had been to draw one race to its support and drive the other race to its opposition. He noted Gibbon, the historian, as saying that the most absurd and oppressive system or government which could be conceived of is that which subjects the native of a country to the...
