C. Wile, M. D., in the New England Medical Monthly, January. 1888 - In the delicate conditions of the stomach, when every thing else has been rejected I have saved many lives by giving Imperial Granum. I consider this as one of the very best foods the physician can find to assist him in carrying through his patient to recovery; and I have found it of inestimable value in the later stages of Phthisis, Gastritis, Gastric Catarrh, Dyspepsia and Dysentery. It requires little effort of the stomach to digest, and I have never known it to be rejected if properly prepared, given in small quantities and at frequent intervals. The great care used in its manufacture will lead the physician to expect the same product all the time, and we can assure him that he will never be disappointed, as we have fully tested it in our extended experience. We speak from experience when we say that the Imperial Granum is both safe and nutritious. It has been on the market for many years, and the largely increasing sales show that many others have found like results attending its use. - The Christian Union, N. Y. As a Medicinal Food Imperial Granum, which is simply a solid extract from very superior growths of wheat, is unexcelled. It is easy of digestion, is not constipating, and is to-day the Standard Dietetic preparation for invalids, for the aged, and for the very young. -...
